The ambassadors were unable to reach a final decision to-day because they were faced with the disinclination of various countries to furnish asylum for the ex-monarchs. It was said the final disposition was proving to be an awkward problem.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Mebilization preparations are proceeding everywhere in Czecho-Slovakia, both in the Czech and Slovak districts. Premier Benes told the Chamber of Deputies in connection with the Little Entente's ultimatum to Hungary, according to a dispatch from Prague to-day to the Havas Agency. The dispatch quoted the Czecho-Slovakian Fremier as saying that the government would not refrain from the most energetic measures in carrying out the ultimatum, although all action would be kept within the terms of the peace treaties and within the agreement between the Little Entente and the Allied powers.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 27.—Closing of the Merchants' Bank of Augusta, a state institution, announced last night, was followed to-day by the suicide of Eugene E. Romeborough, vice-president and director of the bank Examination of the institution last week by the state banking department showed book assets of $2.373.620 and total indebtedness of $1,892,034, of which $494,460 was owing to banks and $1,337,570 to depositors.

Charles $500,000 in Debt

GENEVA, Oct. 27 (By The Associated Press.)—A federal government inquiry shows that one of the reasons which caused former Emperor Charles to attempt his recent coup related to his heavy financial difficulties. It is said that he left debts of about $500,000. He had lived at the rate of $200,000 a year and large sums were spent by him in propaganda and upon his followers. Most of the Hapsburg crown jewels and the private jewels of Charles were paxned in Geneva and Zurich.

The work is the most popular of all symphonies and is almost ances in a season being nothing out of the ordinary; its choice needs neither explanation nor excuese. The other compositions in the list were Rachmaninoff's symphonic poem, "The Island." compositions in the list were Rachmaninoff's symphonic poem, "The Island of the Dead" (which the composer has judiciously pruned of some of its redundant meterial); a prelude and fugue for pianoforte and orchestra by Daniel Gregory Mason, which was performed for the first time in New York (Mr. John Powell playing the pianoforte part), and the prelude to Wagner's "Meistersinger"; a well-constructed scheme. structed scheme.

New Band of Admirable Caliber
The reconstructed band is one of admirable caliber; let this be said at the outset. It has the old muscularity in the string choir which was a characteristic of the Philharmonic so long ago as when it was a co-operative body of musicians. Its wood-winds are euphonious, though some might have wished for more of the reedy twang from the technically capable and religible bassoons, which spoke in the tender and fragile voice of the oboes. Of the flutes we are not yet prepared to speak words of special approbation. The brass choir sounded ample in volume and rotund and was not permitted to become obstreperous.

Mr. Mason Writes for Sake of Music
Mr. Mason writes for Sake of Music
Mr. Mason has made a frank, straightforward effort to write music for the sake of music. He does not profess bellef in any fantastic notion as to the capacity of the art in general or his own in particular (which is refreshing as well as comforting); nor does he attempt to employ new harmonic or instrumental idioms. It occurred to him that the time-honored form of a prelude followed by a fugue which should have some relationship with its introduction might be made interesting from a purely musical point of view, and he ventured upon the experiment — ventured and achieved highly creditable results. We should not call his composition a fugue in the old sense. To us it seemed on a first hearing to be a sort of fantasia in the fugal style, with sidewise promenades into the contrasted moods of a symphony. And there was much music in it that arrested the attention and rewarded it.

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
LAPORTE, Ind., Oct. 27.—Pleas to save Charles Bedford, son of a New York millionaire oil magnate, will be made in the Laporte County Superior Court to-morrow. Bedford, who is a college graduate, is said to have escaped from an insane asylum in Pennsylvania before arriving in Michigan City, where he stole an automobile, driving it to South Bend, where he was arrested. He received a penitentiary sentence and was awaiting removal to the institution when the father, by sending medical experts to Michigan City, succeeded in having the sentence suspended pending a sanity inquiry.

in a maze of bewildering technicalities that befog the subject

A few years ago experts determined the value of foods by the "calory" standard. Food was measured by the same rule used in gauging the value of a ton of coal. Then somebody came along with a broadside of common sense and shot this theory full of holes and opened the way for the orgie of vitamines we are now going through.

It was discovered that no matter what else you get in your rations you had to have vitamines. Three or four kinds were identified and enterprising benefactors began to sell them by the pound

NORMALCY

The lowering of the dis-count rate and the increas-ing demand for high grade investment bonds are encouraging signs of a ten-dency toward normal financial conditions. This means also a lower yield from non-speculative securities. At such times our 51/2 % Guaranteed Mortgages, with their absolute safety and unchanging value, grow more and more attractive.
